The Story Untold: Education of Blacks in the South

Featured Speaker:

Dr. Lowell K. Davis
Vice-President of Student Affairs
University of Texas at Arlington

WE will explore what education looked like for Blacks in the south from 1863, which is when the emancipation proclamation was written, until approximately 1980. Participants will learn about the types of institutions, the curriculum, federal and state legislation as well as personal accounts of individuals who navigated education in the united states during this tumultuous period.
